Shifty Sheen IN DENIAL!

He didn't tell the truth to Dr. Oz, says body language expert

CHARLIE Sheen was murdering the truth when he told TV's Dr. Oz all his sex partners knew he was HIV-positive, a top body language expert told The National ENQUIRER.

The Hollywood bad boy also appeared unsure about his commitment to living healthy and drug-free after his HIV diagnosis four years ago!

"He doesn't believe his own BS!" Susan Constantine, president of Silent Messages LLC, and an expert in criminal interrogations, told The ENQUIRER.

Throughout the interview on "The Dr. Oz Show," Charlie was slightly "shrugging his shoulders" — an indication he felt uncertain about what he was saying, she said.

"He's having a very difficult time being truthful with himself. He's in denial!" declared Susan.

During the intimate sit-down on Jan. 12, the former "Two and a Half Men" star, 50, shared his plans to become a spokesperson for the HIV-AIDS community.

"I hope in my abilities to do something really positive with this," he told Dr. Oz.

But the sex creep seemed shifty from the get-go — starting with his claim that he'd been upfront with dozens of his female conquests, said Susan.

"When he said, 'No one was infected and I told everyone,' he smirks, and then uses his hand to cover his mouth, his smile," Susan told The ENQUIRER.

"That's what's known as 'duper's delight,' which is a huge BS indicator."

Sickeningly, Charlie's involuntary smirk showed he was "aroused" because he thought he was fooling people, she added.

Meanwhile, ex-wife Denise Richards has hit the scumbag actor with a lawsuit accusing him of withdrawing money from the trust he set up for their daughters Sam, 11, and Lola, 10, to fund his party lifestyle.
